TWO SIDES TO A QUESTION

(Original.)

I was in New York for a day with nothing to do, and to pass the time I strolled into the park. There was a balmy air coming up from the south, a cloudless blue sky, opening buds, the piping of nest building birds. Strolling down the mall, I met a perambulator, pushed by a negro boy, in which sat a young man of twenty-two or twenty-three years. As he passed me I noticed a melancholy look on his face which bespoke some great grief. To my surprise, he gave me a glance of recognition. Besides, his features were familiar to me. I turned, and he looked back.

"You don't remember me, colonel," he said.

"I admit I can't place you."

"Not remarkable since you have not seen me since I was cadet gray, was clean shaven and had my hair cropped. You were teaching me the art of war, which in my case meant how to make a wreck of myself."

"You were of that class graduated in advance to take part in the Spanish war?"

"I was; Granger—Ward Granger." Suddenly it all came back to me. This man had been one of the prominent men in his class, a cadet captain, an excellent student, an all round popular man.

"My dear boy," I exclaimed, taking his proffered hand, "I remember you perfectly for an honor to your class, and I know by your war record that you are an honor to your country."

"A retired honor, with no feet," he said gloomily.

A picture flashed before me—a "hop" at West Point. Granger was a graceful dancer, and I had noticed him especially sailing past me in all the freshness and confidence of youth with a beautiful girl to whom he was engaged to be married.

"Let me see," I said musingly. "It seems to me that you and Miss—"

"Towne?"

"Yes, Miss Towne."

"We were engaged when I went to Cuba. When I was sent back in the condition—"

"Surely she did not?"

"She showed herself a noble girl. It was I who would not consent."

"You?"

"Yes, I," he went on bitterly. "Do you suppose I would permit a young girl of twenty to enter upon the career of a man condemned to live a cripple, to witness every day his wrecked hopes, to see him trundled about like this, to turn her course at the very beginning into a channel which must grow darker to the end? Not I. You never taught me that kind of honor, colonel."

"Yet how many women in their youth have wrecked their lives by marrying men perfect in bodily health, but lepers within! An imperfect body is better than a devilish soul."

"No woman should knowingly take my burden, and no woman shall take it."

Though I made no reply, I felt that he was right.

"Is Miss Towne married?" I asked.

"No."

I sat down on a wooden bench. The negro went a short distance away, and Granger and I talked for an hour. Then I left him, bidding him goodbye, for I had been ordered to a southern post and was to leave the next day.

A year later I received an envelope by mail from which I took cards announcing the marriage of Lieutenant Ward Leighton Granger, U. S. A., retired, and Helen Arline Towne. By the same mail came a letter from the bride:

Dear Colonel B.—Ward has asked me to write to you to "confess," what he calls his "chambré retreat," from the position taken by him at the time he last saw you. I bear witness that he maintained that position for a year, during which time I regularly fought to carry it both by assault and undermining. He says he gave up his reasons, and it only remains for me to give you mine—viz, I could not live without him.

I laid the letter down with a sigh. I was sufficiently experienced to understand the burden this woman had taken on herself and considered her course and the yielding of her husband a mistake. I wrote a note of encouragement, but refrained from expressing any later while exchanging stations I passed through New York. I knew I ought to call on Ward Granger and his wife, but dreaded to do so, expecting, even after a few years, to see the effects of what I considered an unfortunate marriage. Nevertheless I called. I was ushered into the library and in a few minutes heard the thump of crutches above, then Granger coming downstairs. Beside him, holding with one hand to a crutch and with the other to the banisters, walked a boy of two years, clattering like a mangle. Mrs. Granger followed, admonishing her son to be careful and not get in his father's way. I advanced into the hall to meet them and at a glance saw that Granger was no longer a mental sufferer. His face broke into a happy smile, while his wife, also smiling, exclaimed:

"You didn't run?"

"I—mistake—I assure you—"

"A nice letter of congratulation you sent us—could as an icicle!"

"Admit, colonel," said the husband, "that if you were on a court martial to try me for a dishonorable surrender you'd convict me."

"And you'd convict me," said the wife, "of recklessness and stupidity."

"Madam," I replied, "I would sentence any woman for such an act to be shot, but in your case I would recommend a pardon and promotion to the highest rank."

An Admirable Crichton

(Original.)

To say that a man is an Admirable Crichton means that he has many accomplishments in which his skill is remarkable. The original Crichton spoke twelve languages, could dispute in Latin on any subject, was a master of fencing and all manner of sports, he sides being an excellent actor.

I once knew an Admirable Crichton. He possessed a genius for everything except money making. His name was Lawrence Dudley. As the real Crichton was in the service of the Duke of Mantua, a tutor to the duke's son, so Dudley, after taking every honor in the universities he attended, went south and tutored in the family of a wealthy planter named La Fourche. He taught Marie La Fourche music and prepared young Ben La Fourche for college.

This was in the autumn and winter of 1890-91, and the spirit of civil war was red hot in the south. Dudley had no faginated matter of the planter families that he was of his being a Yankee did not change their enthusiasm for him. However, it finally came to his ears that La Fourche had been advised to send him north to save him from rough treatment. Dudley asked La Fourche if his presence in the house would be compromising.

"By no means," replied the planter. "Everybody knows my loyalty to the south. Moreover, if you leave, Ben will not be ready for college, and I am anxious to have him enter next June."

"Then you are quite willing that I should maintain my position?"

"Act your own pleasure."

"The next day a printed circular was received by each and every man in the place whom Dudley knew, challenging all comers to argue the question brought between the states with knife, pistol, small sword, cut-throat, lance, javelin, halberd, any kind of weapon that had ever been used by contentious man. In any other part of the world such a circular would have excited laughter. In the south, where the turn of old has often sprung up like a flower from a root dormant for centuries, the case was different. The young planters of high degree met informally for consultation as to what should be done. They decided to send a polite note to Dudley accepting the challenge, the test to come off in a tourney. The day was set, though Dudley averred that the meeting should be no gloved affair and none but the necessary men witnesses should be present.

"The parties met in a secluded spot hedged in by trees. There were three men present, each of whom had received a circular, as well as several strangers who had got wind of the affair and come uninvited. The first man pitted against Dudley was Stewart Anderson, who had studied defense with fells in Paris and had fought several duels with the rapier. The two men faced each other in shirt and trousers and began to fence. Within a minute Anderson's sword went flying over a tree. With true southern fire he called on Dudley to finish him. Dudley put his hand on his heart, bowed low and said he would not deprive the south of so worthy a gentleman.

The next affair was with pistols, and Dudley ended it with a quick fire, shooting the knuckle of his opponent. They were followed by an engagement with cut-throats. Dudley's opponent having been especially trained with this weapon while at sea, Dudley parried the man's thrusts for awhile and then gave him a blow with the flat of his cut-throat that stunned him.

This finished the contests so far as the regular entries were concerned, but as the men were urged forward and the strangers stepped in, the tourney was of a very different texture from the young planters, who had fought honorably and abided by the result, and evidently meant by hook or by crook to kill Dudley. The planters objected, offering to give all comers a chance at his life.

The gang put forward a desperado whose skill with the bowie knife was celebrated. There was a change in Dudley. There can be no fooling with bowie knives, and Dudley knew that he must kill or be killed. The onlookers gathered about, expecting to see a desperate struggle. They were disappointed. The signal to begin was given by a pistol shot. Almost before the shot ceased to reverberate Dudley's knife was buried in his opponent's heart.

There was an awed silence for a moment. Then the strangers made a rush for Dudley. The opponents he had vanquished sought to protect him, but before they could do so he had killed two more of the gang, when the others took to flight.

Dudley invited his opponents to the La Fourche plantation, where standing by a sideboard with a glass in his hand, he recited an improvised humor on account of the affair in verse.

How much longer Dudley maintained his position in the south I never learned or whether he entered the Union army. In the seventies I visited Italy, and while chatting with a friend who lived there he remarked:

"By the bye, we have an American here for all the world like that Scotchman who served the Duke of Mantua. He is a professor in the university. He can run faster, shoot straighter, write better, talk more languages, write better verse, deliver better sermons than any scholar, pirate or clergyman that ever lived."

"Oh, I know who that is! It's Lawrence Dudley."

"That's the man—Dudley—around here they call him Crichton."

The Sargasso Sea.

The Sargasso sea is a region in the Atlantic about midway between southern Europe and America, extending from 21 to 23 degrees north latitude and between 29 and 45 degrees west longitude. It derived its name from a Portuguese word signifying a grape, and was so called because the seaweeds characteristic of the region bear on their branches small air cells, which in shape are not unlike the grape clusters. The weeds themselves are among the most peculiar of vegetable productions, since they have no roots nor any signs of fructification and are propagated by division. They float in the water, sometimes in dense masses extending for miles.

This portion of the Atlantic is a great eddy, little affected by the currents which surround it on every side, and the stillness of the water, it is supposed, has contributed to the development of the weeds in the vast quantities in which they are found. The floating masses were noticed by Columbus and his men, to whom they were a source of uneasiness, as the sailors supposed they indicated shallow water. Detached masses of the weed are often seen in the gulf stream, and the long, yellow lines of floating weed are a sure indication of its close proximity.

Power and Noise.

A large nose is always an unfailing sign of a decided character. It belongs to the man of action, quick to see and to seize opportunity. A small nose indicates a passive nature, one less apt to act, although he may feel as deeply. He will have many theories, while the possessor of a large nose will have deeds to show. Persons with small noses are most loving and sympathizing, but their friendship is not the active kind.

A nose with the tip slightly tilted is the sign of the heartless flirt. A long nose shows dignity and repose. A short nose, pugnacity and a love of gaudy. An arched nose—one projecting at the bridge—shows thought. A straight nose shows an inclination toward serious subjects. A nose that turns up slightly indicates eloquence, wit and imagination. If turned up much, it shows egotism and love of luxury. A nose that slopes out directly from the forehead, that shows no indenting between the eyes, indicates power. If the nose is indented deeply at the root, the subject will be weak and vacillating. A nose that turns down signifies that the possessor is miserly and sarcastic.—Ladies' Home Journal.

A Bold "Ad."

As may be supposed, the largest advertisement in the world is that of an American firm. But the giant "ad." is not in America. Far off across the rolling deep it is spread along the face of a cliff on one of the islets of the Canary group, so that all passing steamers may sight it and their passengers have the benefit of its advice. The whole sentence is 750 feet long and is painted on the cliff at a height of 500 feet from the waves. There are four words in letters each 30 feet high and 75 feet wide. The huge sign can be seen for miles at sea on a clear day. The boldness of the thing almost takes away any anger which one may feel at the disfigurement of the islet by this bit of commercial enterprise.

$1000 REWARD

Is offered as a guarantee that neither Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription nor Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery contains alcohol, opium, or any harmful drugs. Any one publishing false statements concerning their ingredients will be prosecuted. Doctor Pierce's Family Remedies are composed of medicinal principles, skillfully extracted from native roots that cure the diseases for which they are recommended. They are medicines that cure the diseases, made to satisfy a craving for "boozes."

"Golden Medical Discovery" regulates and invigorates stomach, liver and bowels, and cures dyspepsia, purifies the blood and tones up the system generally.

"Favorite Prescription" cures female weakness, irregularities, extra uterine growths, painful periods and kindred ailments peculiar to women. Accept no substitute for these medicines, each of which has a record of marvelous cures. Substitution means selfishness on the part of the dealer who is looking for the greater profit on an inferior article.

Our daughter who was attending college became very nervous and was advised to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. She took four bottles of the "Prescription" and three of the "Golden Medical Discovery," and you never saw such a change in a person. She said she felt like the same person. She was about seventeen years old at the time. I will gladly recommend Dr. Pierce's medicines to every one I have a chance to help.

I am sure it will help them.

Good Citizenship in Sonoma.

Now that the corner-stone has been ceremoniously laid and work on our New City Hall is progressing as it should, our people no longer enthuse over that subject, but are now beginning to look forward to the more important fact of electing three men to the City Council next month—three good men who will have the true welfare of Sonoma at heart and will carry on the affairs of the municipality for the good of the greatest number of our people.

Thriving municipalities have become so mainly through the efforts of progressive officials who followed in the footsteps of successful contemporaries in other cities. The good City Trustee is not the man who listens to the murmurs of his constituents or who allows himself to be jerked by the coat-tails at the caprice of his fellows. The good official is the one who uses his own judgment and his own eyes to observe the ways of the successful, and acts accordingly.

It is the duty of all citizens who are ambitious for their community and who in their hearts are progress-loving to serve their municipality. If they refuse to serve they ought not to criticize if the affairs of our city falls into the helpless hands of the weak or the clutches of the vituperative strong. The City Council is the expression of a town's citizenship, so every citizen should not only be dutiful and give expression to his views by voting, but he should also serve his fellows; for if the good citizen refuses to act who will we have to vote for? It will necessitate the election of men who will reflect no credit on the intelligence of our people for the outside world will believe that this town did not want men with modern ideas.

The silurian cannot dodge behind conservatism for if all the world loves a lover, so all the modern world despises the man of stagnant ideas. If we put men of stagnant ideas in office to manage the town's affairs Sonoma will never expand. Let the right kind of men declare their willingness to serve their fellows and carve out Sonoma's future. Let no others venture to be the representatives of the wide-awake, modern-loving, ambitious citizens with which our city abounds to-day.

Our earnest improvement-loving women alone have shown they are deserving of an earnest progress-loving Board of City Trustees. Our intelligent up-to-date exponents of municipal bonding have demonstrated their right to a modern, energetic City Council.

FOLLOWING in the footsteps of Santa Rosa it seems likely that through the efforts of the club women who have interested themselves in educational matters that we may soon have a trustee officer in Sonoma to enforce the compulsory educational law. In Santa Rosa the report of the trustee officer shows that out of nineteen letters sent to people who did not have their children at school twenty boys and girls were made to attend. Many parents do not know of the law which compels children between the ages of eight and fourteen to go to school.

With our brewery, our wineries and our mineral water establishment Sonoma Valley cannot possibly be dry. Even those who thirst for knowledge can be satiated at our clubs and our public library. Sonoma is able to accommodate everybody of varying nationalities and tastes.

Physicians tell us that all the blood in a healthy human body passes through the heart once in every two minutes. If this action becomes irregular the whole body suffers. Poor health follows poor blood; Scott's Emulsion makes the blood pure. One reason why is such a great aid is because it passes so quickly into the blood. It is partly digested before it enters the stomach; a double advantage in this. Less work for the stomach; quicker and more direct benefits. To get the greatest amount of good with the least possible effort is the desire of everyone in poor health. DEMENTED HOBO RUNS AMUCK.

Schellville Terrified by Queer Antics of a Man Without Clothes.

The peaceful village of Schellville was thrown into a state of great excitement on Saturday by the queer antics of a demented man, who appeared on the Helberg place laboring under the delusion that he was a survivor of a shipwreck trying to effect a landing in some imaginary cruel surf. The man had but one eye and was stark naked, the former fact probably partly accounting for his inability to see himself as others saw him. When discovered by Helberg he ran and jumped into the creek which was swift and deep. He struggled in the water but finally managed to grab the limb of a willow tree while Helberg went for assistance. Several men came to the rescue but the demented fellow refused to be rescued, declaring that he was in a boat trying to effect a landing and needed no help. His ramblings convinced his discoverers that he was laboring under some hallucination so he was forcibly dragged out of the water and after covering his nakedness, his rescuers brought him to Sonoma where it developed that he was one, Peter Butler, of the genus hobo, suffering from delirium tremens.

Butler was sent to the county jail for 30 days on the charge of vagrancy.

Last Wednesday as Herman Lauen was driving along the road between this place and Glen Ellen, he was run into by a polo pony which was being exercised by one of Rudolph Spreckels' horse trainers. Mr. Lauen was thrown from his rig but fortunately escaped serious injury. The rig, however, was badly damaged and the polo pony considerably cut up.

KNOCKED OUT IN THE FIRST ROUND.

De Rose of Santa Rosa Mixes it With Cornelius to His Sorrow

The boxing bout scheduled to go ten rounds before the Sonoma Athletic Club, last Saturday night, between Billy De Rose of Santa Rosa and Amiel Cornelius, a Sonoma lad, came to an abrupt end in the first round. It came about in this way:

Kid McFadden of San Francisco was referee and introduced the fighters to the audience. Then the gong sounded for the first round and the contestants sprang to the center of the ring, and without waiting for the formality of a handshake, "in such cases made and provided," to use a legal phrase, the scrappers went at each other hammer and tongs. There was a few sharp exchanges of blows when Cornelius' left caught De Rose in the solar plexus. He winced and for the infinite part of a second his left guard dropped. Instantly Cornelius took advantage of the opening, his right shot out like a flash of lightning and caught De Rose squarely on the left jaw. The latter's legs were knocked from under him by the blow, and he went to the mat writhing in pain and then lapsed into unconsciousness, in which state he remained for a long time. Efforts to revive him were finally successful, and an hour after the scrap De Rose was none worse for the knock-out blow, which is said to have been one of the most terrific ever landed by Cornelius, who, in numerous battles here in the past has generally succeeded in landing the knock-out punch in the early rounds of his contests.

The decision and the lion's share of the purse of course went to Cornelius, who has yet to suffer defeat, although he has faced a number of clever boxers in this place the past year.

A large crowd of De Rose's admirers came down from Santa Rosa to see their game little fighter take the wind out of the sails of the Sonoma boy. It is needless to add they returned home nightly disappointed.

Death of Albert Adler.

Albert C. Adler, son of the late Charles Adler and a cousin of Adam Adler and Mrs. A. Bates of this place, died at his home in San Francisco on Tuesday. His death was due to a fall he received while at work in the First National Bank of San Francisco, where he had a fine position. The fall resulted in concussion of the brain.

Adler was 34 years of age and had recently inherited a fortune from his father who also remembered his niece, Mrs. Bates of this place, in his will.

DRAWBRIDGE MUST BE CONSTRUCTED.

Secretary of War Declares that Steamboat Slough is a Navigable Stream.

The Secretary of War, on the recommendation of Col. Heuer and a strong effort on the part of Capt. J. F. Scheller of Schellville, has decided that Steamboat Slough, a tributary of Sonoma creek, is a navigable stream and that the California Northwestern Railway must construct a drawbridge across the slough in lieu of the structure now spanning that stream near the Jones ranch, although the waterway has not been used for many years for navigation purposes.

The present bridge across the slough was built by the California Northwestern when it constructed its branch road to Napa under the impression that the stream was of no use to navigation, and the war department's contrary view will entail a heavy expense on the California Northwestern in the matter of changing the bridge to a draw and the salary of a bridge-tender.

The decision of the war department, on the other hand, will throw Schell's slough, a feeder of Steamboat slough, open to navigation also. This makes possible the proposed landing at the head of Schell slough, projected by Capt. Scheller who will put on a schooner service between that point and San Francisco. The landing at the head of navigation on Schell's slough is only three miles from Sonoma. The old landing at Embarcadero is five and a quarter miles from town.

The matter of granting the right of way and public road to the landing across the lands of the Schell heirs to those who will want to ship produce by water, came up before the Supervisors Thursday but action was postponed until this morning, when Capt. Scheller will appear before that body and make known the official report of Col. Heuer and the decision of the war department in the matter of Steamboat slough, which has a direct bearing on the rights of way petitioned for by residents south of town.

SOLANI IS FOUND GUILTY OF MURDER.

Sent Up for Manslaughter and Retried He Fares Badly.

John Solani, on re-trial at Santa Rosa for the killing of J. Guidotti at Glen Ellen, was found guilty of murder in the second degree by a jury last Saturday night.

Solani was serving ten years for manslaughter at Folsom and was granted the new trial which has ended in his being found guilty of a higher crime than his first conviction called for.

The rulings of the Superior Court were reversed by the appellate court after Solani had served one year of his sentence in the penitentiary.

Three new members were reported and accepted into the club.

A Bride of Three Weeks Beaten by Husband.

A frail and young bride of three weeks, who came from San Francisco to this valley on her bridal tour with her husband, had a very unpoetical honeymoon, to say the least, while here. In spite of all Sonoma's bewitching loveliness and all of Cupid's wiles the bridegroom proved to be any thing but what a chivalrous groom should be, and in a fit of anger, last Saturday night, startled the guests of the resort where he was stopping by beating his bride. The young woman screamed for help and several guests interfered and when they realized what had occurred the unnatural husband was dealt pretty harshly with.

The bride was the highly accomplished daughter of a well known wholesale man of San Francisco and had received a musical education at the Royal Academy in London.

She married one of her father's commercial travelers but upon taking her leave from this valley she declared she would get a divorce from him at once. This bride may well recall Shakespeare's words "Thou wilt needs thrust thy neck into the yoke, wear the print of it and sigh away Sundays."

PROSPECTS GOOD FOR ELECTRIC ROAD

Sonoma Valley May be Affected by Spreckels Interest in Trolley Line

Now that Rudolph Spreckels has been chosen a director of the Petaluma and Santa Rosa Electric Railway Company and, as announced, will devote his time and attention to developing electric roads in this county and adjacent territory, the prospects of a line through this valley seem exceptionally good.

Mr. Spreckels is a big property owner here and will not fail to further the interests of himself and associates, for a road that would tap our territory would undoubtedly be a paying proposition.

An entire reorganization of the Petaluma and Santa Rosa road is now in place. Wm. A. Cattell of New York, the personal representative of E. H. Rollins & Son of Boston, is now President of the road, Rudolph Spreckels is a director and Thomas Aheer the Secretary and Treasurer.

It is said that Mr. Spreckels will acquire Rollins & Son's interests in the corporation.

Every activity in electric railway circles and every new move is now liable to mean much to Sonoma Valley and we may expect surveys in the field to be followed by an extension of the Petaluma and Santa Rosa system at any time.

EFFICIENT GO BETWEEN

[Copyright, 1905, by T. C. McClure.]
Mrs. Maguire rolled up her knitting with a nervous click of the needles.
"If that man don't quit hanging round here," she muttered, "tis in the crazy house I'll be."
She rose and turned her back on the door of the outer waiting room. But the man's face haunted her. It was the helpless look in his eyes of one suddenly cut loose from the ordinary routine of life and cast adrift which Mrs. Maguire could not forget.
She had seen it many times in the last few days, occasionally during the hours when he stood watching outward bound passengers and more often as he scanned the occupants of the ladies' waiting room. In the weariness of his search the vigor of middle life was giving place to age.
"Tis neither food nor sleep he's had this week past," Mrs. Maguire thought and turned with a sudden determination to speak to him.
Even as she did so he staggered and sat down weakly. One hand went out and, grasping a newspaper which lay near, held it before his face. Above it his eyes were fixed in a hungry gaze. Mrs. Maguire knew that his search was ended.
She turned slowly, following the direction of his eyes, and noticed for the first time a small, pale woman sitting with her profile toward the door. The brown hair which lay softly on her temples was plentifully streaked with gray. Her blue eyes held the brightness of unshed tears. The hands, which held a shabby grip-sack on her lap, clutched it as if it were some fast slipping resolve.
Mrs. Maguire left the room and went straight to the man who sat outside.
"Is that who you've been looking for?" she asked quietly.
He tore his gaze away with a start of surprise and nodded.
"Your wife?"
"Yes."
Mrs. Maguire waited a moment. Then she ventured again:
"What did she leave you for?"
"Don't think it wasn't her fault!" He stopped, choking. "She thought I had stopped loving her."
Suddenly his face began to work. "Heater," he muttered, with groping fingers, "Heater—you don't know—what the house is—without you!"
Mrs. Maguire laid a hand on his shoulder and shook him slightly.
"Look here," she demanded, "is it trying to live without food or sleep you've been this past week?"
His eyes had gone back to the quiet figure in the ladies' waiting room as if he grumbled losing sight of it even for a moment. His face held the look of one for whom all things were at an end.
Mrs. Maguire left him and sauntered slowly back to her own domain. Presently she approached the woman with the shabby grip-sack.
"Was it you who was asking me about the western train, ma'am?" she inquired casually.
"No." The woman's eyes were raised in mild surprise for a moment as she shook her head.
"Tis a more comfortable chair you might as well have if you're long to wait," Mrs. Maguire said civilly.
"Thank you, but it is hardly worth while."
Still Mrs. Maguire lingered with such evident desire to do something for the comfort of this passenger that the latter felt constrained by her kindly intent to speak again. "The express for New York leaves at 9:35, does it not?" she asked.
"Yes, ma'am; at 9:35."
Then Mrs. Maguire moved away. She picked up a magazine and leisurely replaced it on the table, shook out some pillows on a couch near the door and slipped outside.
"Tis to New York she's going," she whispered eagerly to the man who still held the paper before his face. "You've got twenty minutes. Take your ticket, and for the love of heaven, man, get something to eat. 'Tis fairly staggering ye are."
What Mrs. Maguire did not see and never knew of took place a quarter of an hour later when a woman, entering the vestibule of a sleeping car, swayed and lost her balance as the engine backed against the train.
For a sickening second her eyes closed. Her hands went out gropingly, dropping the grip-sack they had held. Then the arm that was as the arm of youth in the strength of its love went round her. With a blessed sense of safety, her eyes opened and rested on the well worn edge of a faultless overcoat which only a few weeks before her own fingers had repaired.
"Heater!"
In the wavering light the face of the man, who through love of her and the loss of her had aged within a week, was white with pleading.
And the woman stumbled forward against his breast.

What She Bought.

"Was she willing to pay so much for such an insignificant husband?" asked the thoughtful girl.
"Oh, dear, no," replied the well-posted girl. "She was buying a position in English society when she took the duke and not a husband. He was simply done up in the package."—Chicago Post.

Cured Consumption.

Mrs. W. B. Evans, Clearwater, Kansas, writes: "My husband lay sick for three months. The doctors said he had quick consumption. We procured a bottle of Ballard's Horehound Syrup, and it cured him. That was six years ago and since then we have always kept a bottle in the house. We cannot do without it. For coughs and colds it has no equal." See ad and $1.00, sold at Simmons' drug store.

POLITENESS IN JAPAN.

Even "Giving Notice" Is Made an Occasion of Compliments.

Politeness distinguishes the relations between mistresses and maids in Japan. It is so inextricable in Japan that even the ceremony of "giving notice" is turned into an occasion of compliments. There are no vulgar threats or sulking or recriminations or scoldings or "answering back." A servant will never tell her mistress that she is dissatisfied or has had some better place offered her. That would be unpardonably rude. Instead she asks for a few days' leave of absence. This is willingly granted, for Japanese servants have no settled time for taking holidays.

At the end of the given time the mistress will begin to wonder what has become of the girl. She is not left to wonder long. A letter arrives couched in the most polite and humble terms and giving any excuse but the real one. Sometimes it will be that she has found herself too weak for service or that illness at home detains her. Whatever it may be, the plea is never contested, but accepted as final and a new servant engaged. Then, after some weeks have passed, very likely after taking a fresh place, the old servant will turn up one day, express her thanks for past kindnesses and regrets at not returning in time, will take her arrears of wages and her bundles and disappear forever. So the matter ends with the kindest semblance of feeling on both sides.

If the mistress on her part does not wish to have the girl back, she will tell her so to her face, but will send word. Even when servants come on trial for a few days they often leave voluntarily to fetch their belongings or make arrangements for their return, never because they have any "complaints" to make. Any discontent is to be endured rather than the suspicion of bad manners or of anything leading up to a "scene."

Afflicted With Rheumatism.

"I was and am yet afflicted with rheumatism," says Mr. J. C. Bayne, editor of the Herald, Addison, Indian Territory. "But thanks to Chamberlain's Pain Balm, an able one more to attend to business. It is the best of liniments." If troubled with rheumatism give Pain Balm a trial and you are certain to be more than pleased with the prompt relief it affords. One application relieves the pain. For sale by L. S. Simmons.

Breaking It Gently.

Young Wife—Why, dear, you were the stroke out at college, weren't you?
Young Husband—Yes, love.
"And a very prominent member of the gymnastic club."
"I was the captain."
"And quite a hand at all athletic exercises."
"Quite a hand? Why, I was the champion walker, the best runner, the best man at lifting heavy weights, and as for carrying, why, I assure you, I could shoulder with ease a barrel of—"
"Well, love, just please hold the baby for a couple of hours. The nurse has gone out, and I'm tired!"

A Hint to Travelers.

While in Suffolk, Va., Henry Croll, Jr., proprietor of the Beaverton, Mich., Hardware Co., was taken very sick with bowel trouble. A traveling salesman from Saginaw, Mich., advised him to get a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which he did. "It soon cured me, and I take pleasure in recommending it," he says. "No one should leave home on a journey without a bottle of this remedy. It is almost sure to be needed and is not obtainable while on stamships or cars. Sold by L. S. Simmons."

CHIVALRY OF SAVAGES.

Many Barbarous Tribes Are Exceedingly Respectful to Women.

Untraveled people commonly suppose that savages always treat their women badly, making more slaves and beasts of burden of them. This is true in some cases, but many barbarians are exceedingly chivalrous toward women.

The Maoris of New Zealand always treat women with the greatest deference and respect. They call them "the truest gentlemen on earth." They will not permit a woman to do any hard work if they can do it for her, and their boys are taught from earliest youth that rudeness and unkindness toward women are crimes only second to lying and cowardice.

A young English lady named Gertrude Bell traveled alone everywhere in the East, and with the greatest courtesy and hospitality. Special tents were assigned to her use, and the sheikhs vied with each other in being her humble servants. "No well bred English gentleman could have been more chivalrous," she said, "and they were just as courteous to their own women as they were to me."

The Fijians go to extremes. They are so deferential and polite to their womenfolk that they let the latter "rule the roost" entirely. A woman's word is apt to be law in the Fiji islands.

As a rule, women occupy a subordinate place in the East, but Kurdistan is an exception. The Kurds are of Aryan origin and to all appearances are a white race. They claim Alexander the Great as their ancestor and have a lofty code of chivalry. Their women, lovely creatures with fair complexions, blue eyes and flaxen hair, are treated far better than most women in civilized society.

Always Keeps Chamberlain's

Cough Remedy in the House.

"We would not be without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is kept on hand continually in our home," says W. W. Kearney, editor of the Independent, Lowry City, Mo. "That is just what every family should do. When kept at hand ready for instant use, a cold may be checked at the outset and cured in much less time than after it has become settled in the system. This remedy is also without a peer for croup in children, and will prevent the attack when given soon after the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough appears, which can only be done when the remedy is kept at hand. For sale by L. S. Simmons."

PORTRAITS OF CATS.

Various Reasons Why They Are Very Difficult to Paint.

In speaking of the painting of cats in canvas a painter of this recently said: "They are without doubt one of the most difficult creatures to paint, and lamentably few artists make a success of their portraits. They are almost impossible to keep quiet, and the particular fluffy 'catness' of their coats is far from easy to depict in pigments. The famous cat painters are few, and when choice or chance discovers one he, or more often she, finds the gift a mine of wealth."

David Brooke's well known picture of the dapper cat in the foreground of the Corcoran Art gallery in Washington the cat in the foreground could be induced to sit still only by having her feet glued to the floor. But satisfactory results as to expression, in which a cat's face can be particularly eloquent, are not to be secured in this way. Those who have had reason to know say that even the fur of felines is indicative of several things. In health and contentment it stands out fluffily from their bodies, while in fear or displeasure it lies flat and lankly to the skin.

"Not long since a picture was placed on exhibition of a cat lapping milk, with its tail held high. Though the technique was good and the fur really 'furry,' the value of the whole was practically nil, because the cat had been known to cut with its tail in the air. With waving tails they do indeed rush toward the food, but with the first lap or bite down goes the caudal appendage lower and lower, until with a full stomach it sweeps the ground. In the case of young kittens it is often different, however. They scramble into a dish of milk with their pointed, ratlike tails at right angles to their roly poly bodies and sometimes forget to take down this sign of animation and alertness. Any one who knows cats knows that the tail at every angle and with every movement is expressive of some definite emotion."

Give Health, Vigor and Tone.

Herbina is a boon for sufferers from anemia. By its use the blood is quickly regenerated and the color becomes normal. The drooping strength is revived, the languor is diminished. Health, vigor and tone predominate. New life and happy activity results. Mrs. Belle H. Strick, Middleborough, Ill., writes: "I have been troubled with liver complaint and poor blood, and have found nothing to benefit me like Herbina. I hope never to be without it. I have wished that I had known of it in my husband's life time." Sold at Simmons' drug store.

The Popular Thing to Say.

Stock in a Big Mail Order House Six per Cent Earnings Guaranteed And Enables You to Buy Anything for Home, Yourself or Family, at Same Price Your Local Dealer Pays Price of Stock Will soon Be Advanced Act Quickly

Look out for that "rainy day!" It comes sooner or later for so many—we can't tell to-day who may want on the morrow.

Prepare now while you are able for any misfortune that may overtake you. Don't run any risks.

Here is something that will help you provide for the rainy day—an investment that carries with it unusual benefits and provides value for the minute you buy the stock.

Smith's Cash Store is well and favorably known all over the West. Its reputation is of the best and in volume of business it is making tremendous strides forward every year. Some five years ago the stock was selling for $5.00 a share. To-day the price is $10.00 a share. These figures demonstrate what a thriving institution this is the biggest Mail Order House on the Pacific Coast.

Each share of stock is guaranteed to earn 6 per cent a year. And the greatest benefit is derived by the stockholder from the discounts given to the holders of five or more shares of stock. You can buy anything to eat, use or wear at the same price the goods would cost your local dealers. We call them "Owner's Prices."

Suppose you buy goods that altogether cost $50 at our wholesale rate. If you are a stockholder you get a discount amounting to $2.50, and your bill is only $47.50. The saving you will make in one year in addition to the earnings will on all probability more than cover the investment.

Year after year you will be effecting big savings. But should hard times knock at your door and you must not be too sure that something of that sort will not happen—think what it will mean to you to be able to buy everything at cost prices. It might be the very thing that would help you to survive the period of distress.

We are increasing the amount of our capital stock. We are telling you about the stock because we think you ought to invest for your own sake. You couldn't buy stock in any other concern that would pay you so well.

It will not be long before the price of the stock is advanced. You know that means there are not many days remaining in which you can take advantage of this great offer.

For your convenience we are printing a coupon which you ought to fill out—it does not obligate you in any way. Send it to us.
